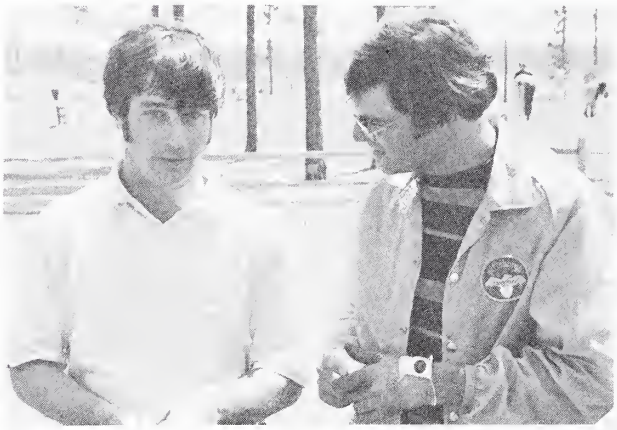
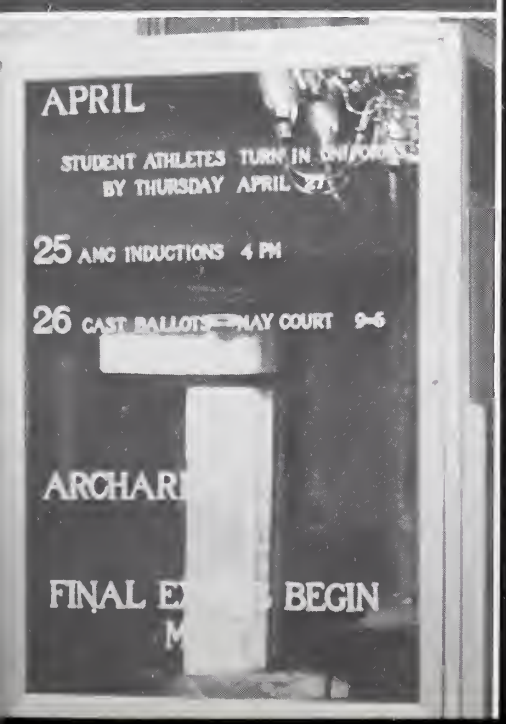
(it was impossible to identify these students because lowder photography lost the names)





And it came to pass early in the morning toward the last day of the semester, there arose a multitude smiting their books and wailing. And there was much weeping and gnashing of teeth, for the day of judgement was at hand, and they were afraid.

For they had left undone those things that they ought to have done, and they had done those things which they ought NOT to have done, and there was no help for it.

And there were many abiding in their house who had kept watch over their books all night, but it availeth naught. But some there were who arose peacefully, for they had prepared themselves the way and made straight paths of knowledge. And these wise ones were known as the burners of the "mid-night oil" and by others as "curve-raisers".

And the multitude arose and ate a hearty breakfast; and they came into the appointed place, and them. And they had come to pass, but some to pass out.

And some of them repented of their riotous living and bemoaned their fate, but they had not a prayer. And at the last hour there came among them one known as the professor (I won't give the other names he is often called by), he of diabolical smile, and passed papers among them, and went his way.

And many and varied were the answers which were given, for some of his teachings had fallen among fertile minds, others had fallen among the fallows, while still others had fallen FLAT.

And some there were who wrote for one hour, but some turned away sorrowful; and many of these offered a little bill in hopes of pacifying the professor; for these were the ones who had not a prayer.

And when they had finished they gathered up their belongings and went their way quietly, each in his own direction, and each one vowing to himself in this manner, "I shall not pass this way again."
